The second election under the Northwestern Michigan College body constitution took place yesterday in one of the best conducted campaigns ever to take place at NMC.

Intense campaigning has taken place for over a week with candidates vying, with their personalities and qualifications, for the three positions available.

Now that the election is over, these students must realize the seriousness of their jobs. The preamble of the constitution states, "...to encourage initiative, cooperation, and responsibility among the members of this college; to promote the common interest and general welfare of the college body; to maintain and perpetuate high ideals in this college;..." This sums up what must now become the personal interest of these newly elected members. The rest of the student body can honestly and earnestly expect this of all members on the council, not just the new members.

Besides the honorary position in which they have been placed, these new officers must take an oath of allegiance (at least to themselves) not only to the college, but to the students who had faith enough to elect them to the student-faculty governing body of the college.

Just because these council members have an obligation to the students, does not mean the students have no obligation to the council members.

You elected the council members and you must support them at all times. If they fail you, get another council, but blame yourselves—you elected them! Support their social activities and their chartered clubs. Encourage them when things are rough, which it often is. And when they're doing a good job, tell them.

The college council is everybody's job, not just the nine people who are acting members. An active council produces an active college. It is a sounding board for both students and people in the five-county area.

The human brain is a wonderful thing. It starts working the moment you are born and never stops until you are asked a question in political science class.

"Did you ever take chloroform?"
"No, who teaches it?" —Tulane Urchin

Answer over heard in Walt Holland's psychology class. The reason a baby cries when it's born is because it's hungry, naked, and already owes the government $1,500.

A gravedigger, absorbed in his work, dug a grave so deep he couldn't get out. Came nightfall and his predicament became more and more uncomfortable. He shouted for help and at last attracted the attention of a drunk.

"Get me out of here," he shouted. "I'm cold."

The drunk looked down and finally distinguished the form of the unfortunate man.

"No wonder you're cold," he said, "You haven't any dirt over you."
