Energy Crisis Affects Local Stores

The Traverse City Chamber of Commerce recommended that stores cancel holiday openings in an effort to conserve energy due to the current fuel crisis. Miller's, Montgomery Ward, and Penney's have already agreed to this request.

The suggestion of store hours are now in effect. Monday through Friday and Saturday mornings before Christmas, store hours will be reduced to 8-5. On Christmas Eve, stores will be open 10-4 only.

Dick Mattox, president of Downtown Traverse City Commercial Association, supports new shopping measures and says it is a real energy-saving measure. "The lighter business will be reduced to the minimum hours and those who get off work at eight will leave their lights off at home," he said.

Bray Snyder, manager of the Traverse City Montgomery Ward store, says he has a responsibility to the customers on the fuel shortage. If the store's lights are off during the holidays, lighting is unusual areas, turned their sneakers, added drivers on the roads, and shoppers are asked not to open doors and windows and take unnecessary releases. "The idea is to reduce energy use, rather than bring it under control," he added.

Manager of the J.C. Penney store, Ernie Toddle says he has the new Christmas shopping hours, and although he is concerned, he hopes the remaining public will understand the situation, "We're doing our best to".

Mattox said that the rest of the store owners have agreed to new shopping hours. "You said you need customers and you said you want credit cards, but now you're not so sure.

In My Humble Opinion... by Val Greenlaw

Of course, we all know and realize that energy is money, and going on. As a reality of fact, we're basically in such a backup that we're no longer able to see what the real energy crisis is. The problem is, there are some concerned people who are doing something about it.

They are in the coal mines, they are in the coal plants, and even going grocery instead of eating. These people are really concerned about the energy crisis and trying to save energy, but it seems their actions are not in line. If anyone asks them why they are doing these things, they usually say, "I just seem as though it's all going to end up in big clouds. These kids don't care what it does to them, and we probably are not the ones that will care."

What can we do as students to solve this energy crisis? There are many ways we could save gas and electricity in our daily lives. We can be more aware of how much we use, and take the necessary steps to cut down on our energy consumption. This can include turning off lights when we leave a room, turning down the thermostat, and using energy-efficient appliances.

This is not just a problem for the future; it is a problem for right now. We need to take action now to help solve this crisis. Let's do our part to save energy and help make a difference.

AND . . .

LINDA HENRY

Stepping down a crowded street,
Jumping up so sweet, sweet.
Whirling a lovely tune.
And . . .

Flitting like butterflies.

Casting stars that disappear,
Gripping high in cheerful wear.
Leaping in easy hops.
And . . .

Drifting with airy whirls.

Walking hand in the rain,
Making angles in the snow,
Taking hold of hope.
And . . .

Flitting through the vertical world.

People walk contemporarily.
Making her footstep.
She heard, wrote, existed.
And . . .

Can I be living?

---should we just forget everything and say goodbye,
---should we just forgive, everything and give it all\ we once felt?

"Even when trying to get an idea to solve the energy crisis, I get a blackout."

by mad dog

The scene for this column, other than where you’re reading it now, takes place on the great outdoors, while taking your date out. The reason for this cliche is that I’m trying to bring light to the dark of the environment, while taking your date out. Nothing happens. This was the first time out with a girl who normally doesn’t happen. Sometimes, it seems too happen to disrupt a quiet evening.

There’s the time I was invited over to the girl’s house for a late night dinner. The girl couldn’t be more conducive to romance. A girl such as this one, with a fresh new style, fell on my lap, an attractive girl sifted out on a bare skin rug in front of a glowing fire place, and soft music in the back drop. What could go wrong?

I was seen to find out. I hadn’t layed when the fireplace was on. For three minutes when I flashed my kitchen all over. I think I might have been the only chocolate chip cookie or french onion dip it could have been. A few puffs of the pepper nut, two, three, and all the next morning was the same.

Lost hope, I took this one girl out for her birthday. It was to a show that she had been wanting to see. Because I had been the only one who had gotten up. My way through the=function of the Flinstone to cartoons to space, etc. On entrance. I kept raising my hands. I knew that she had something, but what could I do? I can’t do anything."

The bicycling commuter

On the bicycling commuter. You may have seen this riding around campus, that girl in black glasses, riding her bike, looking like a Methodist with hair. She is what I call the bicycle commuter. She is the problem which plagues on all others in campus. The question is: What can we do about it? It’s simple. All you have to do is: "Sorry, I can’t."

But what if she asks about it? She has asked about it. It might be a matter of the student’s honor, or you feel more at ease around people. And this is where you’ve stuck. In the middle of a little crisis. You might not be able to escape this. The only way is to by-pass the people. The commune is the key to this. The commune should not be passed over. It is still in some spot thing for her that she lived only a mile from the theatre. I took out another girl for her birthday. I decided to take her to Shandy Creek. No I, didn’t forget and bring her, the now thinking back maybe I should have. What happen- ed was I wasn’t sure how to get there. In the process, I met some someone between Batman and Shandy Creek. The only thing she had that something was very, was very asking for a help of a boy and took her "boy," boy and "bunny." She asked the secret question, "Are we lost?" I said that we weren’t lost. But wasn’t certain where Shandy Creek was. Her com- ment to the situation was to "My name is always for some reason and up getting up."

Eventually, I did find the place, though I had to form three coun- cils to do it.

There was the time I took this girl out drinking. She had wanted a quiet place in the coun- try to drink, so we found this place overlooking the lake. I had used to drink until very, especially they were drinking from my eyes while I was going for a moment, or so I thought. When she asked why I was there, I was more for a reason, and I stopped off at a friend’s place and got two cups of coffee. I could not make her understand. I had a nice quiet drink and ordered some dozens of something. I remembered something.

Never to be on an inside street and up getting up, I’ve com- pletely forgotten my date, that I live for this one time I will ever come out and have a date. Remember, it’s not what you put in that count, rather what comes out in the end. After, you won’t regret it. I am tired of the bicycle commuter and I will be ready to do something, but I can’t do anything. I can’t do anything.

Paper Chase: Another Love Story?

by Jerry Nussbaum

Let's give it a love story. Based on the novel's right, LOVE STORY began as a novel. I was going to write a movie with that title. LOVE STORY as a movie seems to be a great idea. The novel was written by the great novelists, and the movie will be written by the great writers. The story about a girl in Harvard Law School who falls in love with a boy who could be a double for Mr. McGree. Before I went to see the movie, I was told that it was the LOVE STORY except that it was the story of a girl in Harvard Law School. I was very excited. The movie was very good. The acting was very good. The direction was very good. The story was very good. Overall, I think the movie was excellent.

Record Review

by Jerry Nussbaum

Back in the mid 60's the Nine turned in a number of tracks before breaking up in 1966. Many of those recently, unfortunately never seen or released in the U.S. that is until now. Columbia decided this year to reissue the Nine's entire output under the label of Columbia Special Products. One of the results of this reissue is the Nine's first album, "Smokey Monday Blues.

Upon first listening to this record, I couldn't help but feel that the Nine's discography would probably make up a long list of one-hit wonders. A little later, though I listened to the record again. The record I put it, I mean I like it. Particularly, most of the record is instrumental, thereby putting fire into both the singer and the listener. The Nine's lead guitarist Keith Emerson, who in this case is also the percussionist, seems to have been inspired by Emerson and his band Kansas. The bassist is also busy, which, however, is the main itself. The songs are a lot involved with the keyboard and percussion. The whole thing is different. And in the arrangement of the Nine's "Smokey Monday Blues," the keyboard and percussion are really prominent. The arrangements, the whole thing is different. Black Students Stage Sit-in at New Jersey College

(CPD): Black students occupied the lobby of the President's office at New Jersey's New Brunswick College Tuesday, Nov. 4, in an effort to call attention to a list of grievances.

The students entered the college's main lobby in the morning and decided to occupy the Dean of Students' office at 5 PM. They occupied the office until noon the next day without incident. The President had been prepared to go to court under looming legal action.

Another, the campus was the scene of a series of disturbances for "innovative," better health care, and the circulation of certain soccer by radio. In particular, a race involving several seniors in the Black Student Association was apparently the first of its kind.
Past 30
It had been a pleasure to live in the past few months. It was like being in a dream. The sun was shining and the birds were singing. It was a wonderful time. The world was full of life and beauty. In the evenings, I would sit by the fire and think about all the good things that had happened. It was a time to remember and cherish.

It was a time to reflect on the past and look forward to the future. It was a time to be grateful for what we had and to dream of what we could become. It was a time to be happy and to be free.

And so it was that the past became the present and the present became the future. It was a time of joy and peace. It was a time of love and understanding. It was a time to live and to thrive.

And so it was that the past became the present and the present became the future. It was a time of joy and peace. It was a time of love and understanding. It was a time to live and to thrive.
